cardiovascular respiratory and related conditions cause more than 40 percent of all deaths globally and their substantial burden is rising particularly in low and middle income countries. In many countries their burden extends well beyond health effects to include significant economic and societal consequences. Most of these conditions are related, share risk factors and have common control measures at the clinical population and policy levels. Lives can be extended and improved when these diseases are prevented, detected and managed. This volume summarizes current knowledge and presents evidence based interventions that are effective, cost effective and scalable in low and middle income countries.

The health care system privileges specialized therapies designed to treat psychiatric disorders, but many patients want to talk freely about troubles in their lives and therapists want to enable them to do so. This common interest requires a sense of safety promoted by a caring relationship. The first part of the book includes an evidence based critique of short term therapies bearing scientific credentials that dominate the field. Do we really need hundreds of them? Meanwhile, a half century of research attests to the overriding importance of the therapeutic relationship and therapists' interpersonal skills. Our humanity looms large here; science's majesty does not entitle it to a monarchy.
